

ABSTRACT

B
An implant for medical purposes based on a physiologically compatible plastic is composed of thin foldable structural elements ^{of foil having a thickness of 10 to 200 micrometers} having a surface that can be wetted by a fluid lubricant and is preferably surrounded by a covering that contains a lubricant such as e.g. an aqueous fluid.